CREATION OF AN ADVANCED CERTIFICATE PROGRAM IN THE DEPARTMENT OF SECONDARY EDUCATION AND YOUTH SERVICES (SEYS)

CURRICULUM FOR ADVANCED CERTIFICATE IN TEACHING CHINESE

Admission Requirements:

Applicants must have a bachelor’s degree in Chinese language or its equivalent (36 credits) with a minimum GPA of 3.0 (or its foreign university equivalent). Applicants are required to submit two letters of recommendation, a personal essay of approximately 500 words, and must have a recent score of Intermediate-High or higher on the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL) Chinese Oral Proficiency Interview (OPI) and a score of Intermediate High on the ACTFL Writing Proficiency Test (WPT). (The ACTFL OPI and the WPT levels of Intermediate High are the minimum proficiency levels that candidates for graduate study are required to have by Languages Other Than English (LOTE) programs for NCATE accreditation.

Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold an undergraduate or graduate degree from an accredited American institution of higher education must submit proof of either a score of 600 or higher on the written version of the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL), or pass the TOEFL Internet-based Test (iBT) with a minimum Total score of 100 and a minimum speaking score of 25. An interview may be requested as part of the application decision. A portfolio showing evidence of meeting ACTFL Program Standards for the Preparation of Foreign Language Teachers Initial Certification is an exit requirement.

Candidates who complete this certification program can choose two programs that are already available at Queens College to receive Professional Certification- the MSED in literacy in SEYS and the MSED in TESOL.

Background/ Foundation:

There is significant recent activity across the country that shows interest in and activity surrounding Chinese teaching that in part motivates the creation of this program. The National Security Language Initiative (NSLI), for example, is a federal program with the goal of increasing US citizens’ studies of critical need foreign languages including Arabic, Chinese, Russian, Hindi, Farsi, and others from kindergarten through university. Events such as 9/11 as well as China’s emergence as an economic and political power are part of the stimulus for such interest from the public and private sector to study Chinese for commercial and political reasons. Part of the government’s strategy has been to provide FLAP grants for beginning Chinese programs in schools. Other grants have been provided for creating Language Teacher Corps due to the limited availability of teacher preparation and pedagogical resources for such critical languages. This is the first time that the federal government has supplied FLAP grant funds for establishing language programs.

The two language education faculty members in the SEYS Department are currently collaborating with several school districts to apply for a FLAP grant for developing and expanding language offerings in schools from K-12 levels including Chinese.

Sweley (2006) provides statistics from a 2003 report that approximately 24,000 K-12 students were learning Chinese. The English version of the People’s Daily Online (July 11, 2006) has an article that describes an initiative by the Confucius Institute (based in New York) to provide Chinese teachers for New York schools. The article stated that “New York has at least 2,400 elementary and secondary schools and institutions of higher learning that need Chinese teachers…. Only 270 schools have Chinese teaching staffs [sic].”

Clearly a major key to developing Chinese-speaking citizens in the US is to provide enough teachers to meet the demand in the public school population. Yet a 2005 report (Sweley, 2006) documented that there are only four Chinese language teacher education programs accredited by NCATE in the US- the University of Iowa, New York University, Ohio State University, and University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Recently Hunter became an NCATE accredited Chinese teacher preparation program, so in the New York City area there are now two institutions that prepare Chinese teachers.

Clearly there is a marked need for creating a Chinese teacher certification program at Queens College. Not only is this a need to provide a useful service to the schools, but it is also an opportunity for Queens College to attend to the needs of the nearby Chinese community. The 2000 Census data reports the following figures for Asian or Pacific Islander- Chinese population in the area: New York State- 284,144; Bronx, NY- 7015, Kings, NY-68,191, New York, NY- 71,723; and Queens, NY- 86,885. The figures were not broken down for Chinese alone in the 2000 census data.
The SEYS Department and the Foreign Language Education program faculty are interested in responding to and helping to fill the gap for providing qualified Chinese teachers in New York schools. As there are currently only two universities in New York City offering an accredited certification program in Chinese the present proposal will create a quality program that would enable Queens College to provide a needed service to the Chinese community and bring recognition to the CUNY system. The proposed program will be administered and coordinated by the two foreign language education faculty members in SEYS.

The language education faculty members in SEYS are currently writing a graduate degree in critical languages that may be available in the future in Chinese, Arabic, and Russian. Since there are no graduate programs at QC in these languages this program will be a pedagogy degree without language components or will include graduate study abroad.

Relationship To Existing Programs At The College:

The proposed program will not compete with any existing programs at Queens College and we expect it to benefit the college through public relations and service to the schools and the Chinese community.

Projected Enrollment:

There has been a large interest in a program leading to certification in Chinese for the past year. Currently there is a group of interested individuals who have established a club for teaching Chinese at Queens College. This group provided a list of 40 signatures of individuals who are interested in enrolling in such a program (attached).

The projected minimum enrollment will depend on field placement site availability. We are exploring possible field placements for student teaching as well as exploring alternative placement systems, such as placing two student teachers with one cooperating teacher, but we will limit enrollments to match the field placements available. We anticipate enrollments of no more than 10 for the first few years. As there are more qualified teachers in the field we expect enrollments to grow to around 20 students per year.

A quick search of area schools that offer Chinese consist of the following:
- High schools: Flushing, Bayside, Francis Lewis, Newtown, Long Island City HS, Jericho High School, Great Neck High School, Newcomers High School, Bronx High School of Science, and a number of private high schools;
- Middle schools: Flushing Modern Chinese School JHS 189 and Jericho MS.

We currently have placement relationships with six of the high schools above, and, given that the program began a pilot last fall with high school practicum placements and middle school student teaching, we expect more placement slots to open in the future. We will make contacts with the above schools during spring semester to begin a dialogue about future placements.

Impact On the College:

Queens College has the necessary resources to offer the proposed program with no competition to any of its existing programs. There are sufficient faculty members in the foreign language education program to teach the courses and supervise field placements as well as adjuncts who specialize in foreign language education. SEYS Language education faculty members are currently preparing a proposal for a Masters degree in critical languages (including Chinese). This Masters degree will consist of primarily pedagogy courses with a study abroad component in the language.

Explanation:

The SEYS Department currently offers 3 Graduate Initial Certificate Programs in foreign language (French, Italian, and Spanish) all leading to initial certification in grades 7-12 and consisting of 21 credits. The courses for the proposed program are identical to the courses in the current programs.

* Course descriptions have been appended at the end of this report (see pages 7-8).

Once admitted to the program, candidates are required to:

- Maintain a 3.0 GPA and demonstrate professional dispositions and behavior to remain matriculated and to graduate.
- Meet with an advisor if they get a course grade lower than B- or if they demonstrate questionable dispositions or behavior. The candidate and advisor will then make a plan to determine how to rectify any academic or behavioral problems and conditions for continuation in the program will be determined.
- If the candidate and the advisor agree that deficiencies can be rectified, an individualized plan will be developed and carefully monitored by the advisor and the candidate.

To graduate, all candidates are required to meet the following requirements:

- A 3.0 GPA, and complete all coursework.
- Perform successfully on all program level and unit level assessments.
- Successfully complete a research project developed with, supervised and supported by a faculty member.

QUEENS COLLEGE – March 7, 2007

Background / Foundation:

This graduate program within the Department of Secondary Education and Youth Services prepares individuals with New York State Initial Certification for Professional Certification in middle childhood grades 5-9. The program described here is designed to prepare candidates with the knowledge, skills, and dispositions necessary to work with young adolescents, specifically those who have special needs. This 36 credit program satisfies the requirements of our existing master’s degree of science in education.

5b. Graduate Committee Continued
ACADEMIC SENATE MINUTES, April 12, 2007

Relationship to Existing Programs at the College:

Current Master of Science in Education degree programs in Secondary Education and Youth Services afford graduates the opportunity to seek professional certification in a specific content area. (i.e., English, French, Biology, Chemistry, Earth Science, Physics, Italian, Mathematics, Social Studies or Spanish) in grades 7-12. For Art Education, the graduate is eligible to apply for a teaching license in All Grades (i.e., K-12) and in the Literacy program the certificate of issue is for grades 5-12. This program draws from existing divisional courses to allow candidates to gain graduate level skills in Special Education and Literacy while developing expertise in Middle School education. Thus, the Middle Childhood Generalist is a critical addition to the graduate certification programs and is aligned with the Division of Education goals of creating middle school teacher certification programs to complement existing teacher certification programs at the early childhood, childhood, and secondary levels. This program fills the gap and facilitates candidate’s competencies in this very important educational level in schools.

Projected Enrollment:

It is anticipated that the program will attract 20-25 candidates per year.

Impact on the College:

All courses except for one have already been approved and offered within either SEYS, EECE or ECP as part of other existing graduate programs. All of these courses are being taught on a regular basis. The one remaining course will be offered as a workshop course while awaiting approval.

EXPLANATION:

The Department of Secondary Education and Youth Services proposes the certification program as one that will provide a service to aspiring professionals who are committed to working with students who have special needs at the middle school level. This program is designed to support the goals of the National Middle School Association for achieving quality middle level education; to prepare graduates with “…strong content knowledge and the ability to use research-based instructional strategies and assessment practices appropriate for middle level students.”

Courses

SEYS 707. Major Issues in Education. 2hr. plus conf.; 3 cr.
Prereq.: Basic undergraduate or graduate course in educational foundations (historical, philosophical, or social).

SEYS 718. Classroom Management. 2 hr. plus conf.; 3 cr.

5b. Graduate Committee Continued
ACADEMIC SENATE MINUTES, April 12, 2007

Prereq.: Basic undergraduate or graduate course in educational psychology. Principles and practices of classroom management in secondary schools with a focus on dealing with behavior and discipline problems.

EECE 717. Ecological Perspectives on Development: Early Adolescence. 3 hr.; 3 cr.
Prereq.: 1 course within Ecological Perspectives on Development (EECE 710, 711, and 717) must be taken within the first 9 credits in the program. This course provides a contextually-based study of development, focusing on early adolescence. The interacting influences of family, ethnic group, and peer group on the young adolescent’s emerging identity are examined in relation to school behavior and academic performance. Individual differences in abilities, learning styles, and academic achievement are examined, with attention to ecologically valid assessment strategies for linguistically and culturally diverse populations. The links between school experience and the young adolescent’s susceptibility to substance abuse, violence, victimization, school drop out, and premature parenthood are discussed. School strategies for promoting healthy development in the adolescent years are considered.

SEYSL 701. Foundations of Literacy Development and Instruction. 3 hr.; 3 cr.
Coreq.: SEYS 788. An introductory course in literacy development and instruction of students in grades 5–12. The major area of inquiry is the psychological, sociological, cognitive, and linguistic bases of literacy. Specific topics include the role of literacy in society, history of literacy instruction, current school-wide early childhood, childhood, middle education, and adolescent literacy instructional programs, differentiation of instruction for students with diverse needs, family literacy partnerships, children and adolescent literature, classroom organization, classroom and schoolwide assessment programs, literacy in a technological age and processes of developing literacy proficiency. Special emphasis is placed on factors underlying development of print awareness and usage at all levels, including word identification and spelling strategies, vocabulary skills, comprehension strategies, composing skills, and the supporting roles of speaking and listening to the development of reading and writing strategies.

SEYSL 703. Literacy for Diverse Learners
The primary emphasis of this course is to familiarize teacher candidates about the historical, sociological, and psychological issues related to education of all learners including English Language Learners and students with disabilities in secondary education. English Language Learners and disability issues highlighted within this course include laws and legal mandates; types of disabilities; characteristics of English Language Learners and students with specific disabilities; assessment, diagnosis, and intervention; individualized education and transition planning; curriculum adaptation; assistive technologies; and research-based instructional methods and strategies for English Language Learners and students with disabilities. Teacher candidates develop an understanding of the linguistic and cognitive capabilities of English Language Learners and students with various disabilities and acquire the expertise to adapt instruction for advancing literacy as well as content learning of English Language Learners and students with disabilities. Twenty-five hours of fieldwork focused on English Language Learners and students with disabilities are required.

SEYST 710. Philosophy, Curriculum and Organization of the Middle School
This course provides an introduction to current and emerging trends which are shaping curriculum development and instructional practices in today's middle schools. The course also examines the philosophical underpinnings of the middle school movement and its emphasis on the physical, intellectual, social, and emotional needs and characteristics of the in-between-ager. Topics include: the development of young adolescents; the middle school movement; the curriculum for learners in the middle grades; effective instruction in the middle grades; classroom management and discipline; interdisciplinary team organizations; the advisory role; evaluation; and grouping. The course explores the unique characteristics of the middle school—its concepts, history, philosophy, organization, programs, and students. Emphasis areas include planning, curriculum, teacher guidance, interdisciplinary teaming, organization of time and space, instruction, leadership roles, and evaluation.

SEYSL 702. Literacy in the Content Area
This course is designed to help all teachers facilitate middle and secondary classrooms where reading and writing are effective tools for learning, where collaboration and communication are valued and enhanced in the learning process, and where young people are encouraged to develop critical perspectives and strong voices. Attainment of literacy is central to knowledge construction in all middle and secondary school curricula. Students will examine issues of literacy in different subject areas and the varied demands on readers and writers as the range of literate activities changes according to context. This course is designed to enable inservice teachers and literacy specialists to improve the literacy of all students in the middle and secondary schools.

SEYSL 704. Literature Across the Curriculum,
This course is designed to engage students in a study of the literature of interest to adolescents or young adults. The integration of literature across disciplines can be greatly enhanced when teachers are knowledgeable about historical and current trends in young adult literature as well as the literacy theories that can serve as lenses for examining such texts. Literacy theory and pedagogy will inform all aspects of our study of literature and related media. Students will explore ways to encourage young people in middle and secondary schools to read critically and appreciate a variety of literacy works. The integration of literature into all content areas will be emphasized.

ECPSE 740. Instruction for Adolescent Special Education. 3 hr. plus fieldwork; 3 cr.
Prereq.: ECPSE 700, 722; coreq.: ECPSE 708. Theory and research about young adults with disabilities and exemplary practices in informal assessment, curriculum design and adaptation, effective instruction, person-centered planning, self-determination, supportive learning environments, and instructional technology. Field experiences of at least 15 hours involve students in assessment, curriculum adaptation, planning, and implementing an intervention to assist a young adult to achieve his/her goals. Reflection on practice involves an analysis of self-determination, empowerment, learning, community participation, and behavior change.

ECPSE 708. Collaboration and Transdisciplinary Teaching. 3 hr.; 3 cr.
Prereq.: ECPSE 700; coreq.: ECPSE 710, 730 or 740. Study in theory, research, and exemplary practice in collaborative and transdisciplinary teaching provide the foundation for creating effective learning environments for individuals with disabilities. This course will focus on effective collaborative practices within an inclusive setting which are cross-disciplinary and cross-cultural. At least 20 hours of field experience in collaborating with another teacher and/or related service professional.

SEYSL 700. Research Investigation for Literacy Instruction I. 3 hr.; 3 cr.
Coreq.: SEYS 733.
