Once again we would like to thank Mark Podwal for making available his beautiful art that graces our cover: Faith, #39 They almost wiped me off the earth but I did not abandon Your commandments. © 2014 by Mark Podwal.

For a number of years, Mark Podwal, Queens College alumnus and internationally acclaimed artist, has graciously provided his magnificent artwork to adorn the covers of each of the Fall and Spring issues of the QC Center for Jewish Studies–Arthur and Carole Anderman Culture & Arts Guide. We are indebted to him for each beautiful and meaningful image.

And this year he is especially to be feted: In 2014 Mark donated to the college’s Godwin-Ternbach Museum an elaborate portfolio of prints he created, based on a series of artworks. The original paintings and drawings were exhibited at the Terezin Ghetto Museum in the Czech Republic. The portfolio, entitled All this has come upon us..., contains 42 striking images, each depicting the various underlying anti-Semitic campaigns throughout history that led up to the Holocaust in our own time. Each image is accompanied by a biblical verse from the Book of Psalms, along with Podwal’s commentary. The work as a whole is a masterful amalgam of image and the written word creatively portrayed.

The beautiful cover art on this 2015 Fall Guide is image 39 of the portfolio. Entitled Faith, it is paired with Psalm 119:87 in Hebrew and in English translation: They almost wiped me off the earth but I did not abandon Your commandments.

It is accompanied by the following commentary: “From slavery in Egypt to the loss of their homeland, from persecution to exile, from pogroms to near annihilation, through faith the Jews endured while their enemies vanished.”

To date, the portfolio has been acquired by various major institutions, with all 42 prints on permanent exhibition at Hebrew University on Mt. Scopus in the Rabin Center for Jewish Studies. A number of articles have been written about the portfolio, including a feature in the Atlantic Magazine.

In addition to his artistic endeavors Podwal is a respected dermatologist and the author of award-winning illustrated books, such as A Jerusalem Sky: Stars, Crosses and Crescents; A Jewish Bestiary; and Freud’s Da Vinci. He also has created political cartoons for magazines and newspapers – most notably the New York Times and special edition prints for the Metropolitan Opera and Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Cosponsored by the Center for Jewish Studies, the Godwin-Ternbach Museum will exhibit the portfolio prints in 2016 in conjunction with rare books, manuscripts, and documents from the Jewish Theological Seminary Library. The opening is anticipated in April.

The Center for Jewish Studies at Queens College has just completed another extraordinarily productive and exciting year. There are nine good reasons for our excitement and sense of accomplishment as we enter the New Year.

Award-Winning Public Education Program That Led to the Establishment of the Center for Ethnic, Racial & Religious Understanding (CERRU): CERRU, as a sister organization to the Center for Jewish Studies, continues to bring together an astounding diversity of students—both Jewish and non-Jewish from different ethnic, racial, and religious backgrounds—since 2009 when CERRU was born out of the Jewish Studies Program through a U.S. Department of Education Grant to foster cross-cultural understanding. As we begin our seventh year of partnership with CERRU, more than 500 Queens College students have been trained to pursue difficult dialogues and engage in reflective listening in order to enhance our conflict mitigation work. The student facilitators and fellow students they have recruited and trained have also organized more than several hundred events and programs over the past years. The programs ranging from “Walking in the Other Sides’ Neighborhood,” a fascinating street-level experience of Queens’ rich ethnic, racial, and religious neighborhoods led by scholars of the urban landscape, to large community forums like “Bridging the Divide,” where our trained student facilitators helped guide dialogues on some of the most contested and controversial local, national, and global issues with leaders from opposing sides.

In addition to the events each semester based on current student interests vis-à-vis understanding within the diversity of the campus, since its inception CERRU has hosted a unique capstone program to which the broader community is invited at the close of the Fall semester. Fall 2014’s programming closed with the Third Annual “Innovation Exchange,” entitled “New Frontiers Innovation in the Middle East” in the aftermath of the Third Gaza/Israel War and the ensuing Middle East Discussion series at Queens College. The event hosted by CERRU featured 12 speakers of unique stature ranging from an entrepreneur realizing his vision for private sector development to serve as the path leading to Palestinian economic development and growth of the first Palestinian planned city “Rawabi,” and the largest private sector undertaking of any kind in Palestinian history, to a Jewish educator championing a new educational model for students from poor neighborhoods populated by “castoffs,” immigrants and refugees from over 30 countries including Sudan, Ethiopia, and other nations wrecked by violent oppression and mass killing.

As a special feature of the 2014 CERRU “Innovation Exchange” event, students of the Ibrahim Student Scholar Middle East Leadership and Dialogue Program with Queens College (the Ibrahim Program) relayed unique anecdotes of their experiences from spending June 2014 in the Middle East. As a part of the newly established Ibrahim Program, over the past three years we have led groups of exceptional students from the United States in a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to meet with political, religious, and cultural leaders from the region as well as with grassroots organizations. In June 2015, as in the previous two years, the travel itinerary included not only Israel, Jordan, Oman, the United Arab Emirates, and Saudi Arabia, but also the Palestinian territories. We envision further development of this program within the coming years as the world’s focus remains turned toward that region.

A Dynamic and Expanding Culture & Arts Program: This past year we offered 18 major programs, including world-class scholars and educators, renowned diplomats and political analysts, virtuoso instrumentalists and singers, compelling cinema, and a captivating musical drama, and we initiated additional annual events; last year’s newly created annual Chanukah Celebration boasted 400 plus attendees. In addition, we added a special lecture series to address the latest developments in the Middle East as the Third Gaza/Israel War was winding down.
The series was especially poignant in a debate between Prof. Moshe Halbertal, an award-winning scholar of Jewish thought and philosophy, and Khalil Shikaki, who has served as Director of the Palestinian Center for Policy and Survey Research since 2000.

Many of these superb and creative programs remain free to the public, and several of them included a sumptuous complimentary banquet. (Please see the detailed review of this past year’s Culture & Arts Guide as well as our exhilarating programs for the Fall semester that follows this report.)

Distinguished Faculty: Our world-class Jewish Studies faculty, drawn from 15 different departments within the college, includes some of America’s most eminent scholars. More than half a dozen of our professors have won the coveted Presidential Award for Excellence in Teaching, with one winner this past year of the prestigious National Jewish Book Award.

In a mix of senior as well as younger faculty, many of whom are quickly making their mark in contributions in their respective fields, the Queens College faculty continually grows in strength. This distinguished group of dedicated educators continue to receive coveted awards, promotions, and national and international recognition. Read more detail in the following pages, especially in the Faculty Notes: Achievements and Distinctions (pp. 23–29).

Diverse and Talented Students: At our spring 2015 commencement, yet another crowd of parents, relatives, friends, and faculty filled the Simon and Roslyn Gold Jewish Studies Library, which includes an elegant anteroom and is made accessible to all Queens College students during the academic year. Again, each of the graduates and awardees demonstrated anew their staggering academic achievements and demographic diversity. Our graduates and awardees are among the 2,000 students who speak dozens of languages and represent a multitude of different ethnic, racial, and religious groups, all studying Jewish topics in up to 80 of our Jewish Studies courses throughout the academic year, from over a dozen academic disciplines.

The academic acumen of our graduates and awardees is complemented by their ethical commitment and community service. They represent a core of the campus leadership, from the President of Hillel, to the campus coordinator for the American World Jewish Service, to the co-editors-in-chief of the Journal of Jewish Studies. They also include two of the college’s valedictorians over the past four years.

The Only Jewish Studies Journal in the Nation That Is Totally Student Produced and Where Students Have the Last Word: The students who edit the Queens College Journal of Jewish Studies reflect the best of Queens College. This year, with a special section on the 70th Anniversary of Liberation, the Journal’s inside cover incorporates a proverb chosen by the editor-in-chief from King Solomon: “A righteous man falls down seven times and gets up.” Editor-in-chief Allison Teicher, and layout editor Kimberly Pillinger produced a memorable work. Special recognition to both of them for their diligence and commitment to see this project through.

The 17th edition of the Journal was overseen by Associate Director Diane Spielmann. As in the past, this year’s volume will stimulate readers, making them swell with pride to be associated with the Queens College Jewish Studies Program and the Center for Jewish Studies. Once again it is a “labor of love” by those students who have mastered all aspects of the publication process: soliciting contributions, selecting those to be included, editing all materials, preparing camera-ready copy, and scouring the marketplace for the best printer at the most competitive price. This beautiful and inspiring publication is worth having in your collection. It is available for $12 from the office of Jewish Studies, Jefferson Hall, Room 307; 718-997-4530.

Breakthrough Courses in Bukharian History and Culture: Another example of the excellence of our students that has allowed us to reach a segment of the Queens College Jewish student population significantly underenrolled in our classes is Imanuel Rybakov. A talented recent QC graduate, Mr. Rybakov is an activist within the Bukharian Jewish Congress who organized and took the lead in teaching the first-ever course on Bukharian history and culture at Queens College, which is now in its sixth year. Through Prof. Rybakov’s efforts, we have created the groundwork for an eventual course on the Bukharian–Jewish language (known as Tadjik within the community). Lead stories in the Jewish Week, Daily News and other newspapers heralded the initiative of offering academic courses on Bukharian culture, one of the first in the U.S.

It is estimated that there are nearly 1,000 Bukharian students on the Queens College campus. Bukharian Jews come primarily from Central Asia and the former Soviet Union, and the largest concentration of the Bukharian population in the U.S. resides in Queens.

The course Mr. Rybakov so effectively organized included trips to the Bukharian Jewish Museum, as well as bringing iconic Bukharian musicians and performers to the campus, including Avrom Tolmasov and Tamara Katayeva. This successful experiment in developing courses that engage the Bukharian student body at Queens College has allowed us to add a new course to the curriculum, “Bukharian Jewish Language.”

Difficult Questions, Balanced Answers: Our Center remains committed to asking the hard questions that require responses from a diverse range of perspectives: Is it 1938 again? What is the future of Jerusalem? Are the U.S. and Israel under Obama and Netanyahu heading toward a strategic collision or a Solomonic compromise? How do we most effectively combat anti-Semitism and hatred? In recent years we have brought together some of the greatest minds and notable leaders in Jewish life to address these provocative questions. Instead of one-sided answers, we have participated in a dialogue that includes strikingly divergent ideas:

For example, in my preface to The Jewish Condition: Challenges and Responses—1938–2008, I attempted to make a case for the broad band of opinion approach: “Multiple sides were represented, not because we are devotees of some kind of insipid relativism that insists every point has an equally valid counterpoint, but because there are fundamental issues about which we as a community are resolutely unresolved. Too often, these issues are explored in forums for the like-minded who gather to cheerlead, recite their best arguments, and send their embedded ideologues out to engage in political battle. Our hope was that we might clarify our differences and perhaps discover some unexpected agreement.”

New Community Initiative: In addition to the Center’s robust and highly regarded Faculty Speakers Bureau, we have dramatically expanded our community outreach. Over the past two years we have cultivated formal relationships with synagogues and community centers and developed a series of programs with Temple Beth Sholom in Roslyn showcasing some of our most articulate student facilitators in interfaith dialogues and discussions about Israel and Jewish values, with another series of programs featuring compelling cinema. In recent years we have piloted a new program for high school students at Temple Beth Sholom. Entitled “Let’s Talk About Israel,” the course aimed to empower students to have knowledgeable, nuanced, and successful conversations regarding Israel, its history, and politics with peers and teachers on college campuses and other settings. Additionally, we accept invitations from various colleges throughout the nation to teach one of the popular classroom simulations associated with our award-winning “America and the Middle East: Clash of Civilizations or Meeting of the Minds” program. Each of these events has garnered rave reviews. And this year, under the leadership of Bernie Spear, Chair of the Center for Jewish Studies Advisory Board, we added another seven synagogues to the consortium, with the inaugural program held at the Hollis Hills Jewish Center, where Prof. Ronald Zweig, Director of the Taub Center for Israel Studies at New York University, addressed issues regarding the growing diverse populations of Israel today.

Creative Curriculum That Has Won National Acclaim: The U.S. Department of Education honor was bestowed upon the Center for Jewish Studies in part because of the Center’s award-winning curriculum and public education programs as well as the college’s stunning diversity, with students from more than 140 different countries, speaking more than 80 languages. Our nationally acclaimed curriculum has been featured in the New York Times, Chronicle of Higher Education, CBS-TV National News, National Public Radio, the Jewish Week, the Forward and a host of other electronic and print media.

Many deserve our appreciation: We wish to thank President Félix V. Matos Rodríguez, who came to Queens College this past year, for his kind demeanor and personable style in listening and learning as he became involved in every aspect of the college, including his keen interest in the Center for Jewish Studies and assistance in helping us plan for the future. We also acknowledge Interim President Evangelos J. Gizis and Provost Elizabeth F. Hendrey for their enthusiasm and active participation in a number of our events, and Jeffrey Rosenstock, Assistant Vice President for External & Governmental Relations, for his steadfast support in helping to make many of our programs possible.

And after more than 12 years as Chair of the Jewish Studies Advisory Board, Arthur Anderman graciously stepped down two years ago to “hand the torch” to another esteemed board member, Bernie Spear. Over the years, Arthur helped create new endeavors that have enormously enriched our Center and program, and happily he continues to serve actively on our Advisory Board. We also are fortunate to have continuity in the same caliber of leadership from our current chair, Bernie Spear, as he helps us meet the challenges for the future.

As in the past, we are indebted to our Vice Chair, Pearl Halegua, and also to Elsi Levy, yet another one of the stalwarts on the Center’s Board. Finally, thanks and deep appreciation to the two pillars of our program, Pat Tortorici and Rita Shliselberg. Their service to the Center and the academic program goes far beyond their job descriptions and their paychecks.

Thanks to Our “Friends”: Your Support is Our Future

Our latest grant from the U.S. Department of Education has helped us through these difficult economic times. No doubt, however, you continue to read in the Jewish press and elsewhere that like all institutions—for profit and not-for-profit—CUNY and Queens College were seriously impacted by the recent great recession and very fragile recovery. We are carefully addressing these challenges to ensure our long-term health, but we rely on your steadfast support to enable us to continue to offer so many free programs and to play such a pivotal role in the world of Jewish Studies.

Few institutions of higher education in the United States can offer such a broad range of courses in Jewish Studies, taught by such a learned and vibrant faculty, with such talented and engaged students, on a campus where diversity and respect are so twinned.

We thank you for your past support and hope you will take a few moments to fill out the enclosed envelope and join us as a new member or renew as a Friend of the Center for Jewish Studies at Queens College.

Join us and experience the nine reasons why we are excited and proud.
From the start of our Fall programming to its finish in the Spring, “innovation and creativity” are the hallmarks of our programming . . . . Delightful and yet historically profound, “From Rosenfeld to Robeson,” a presentation of the National Yiddish Theatre–Folksbiene, opened the Fall season for the Queens College Center for Jewish Studies, and what an opening! Opera star Elmore James and Folksbiene’s Artistic Director, Zalmen Mlotek, captivated their audience with fresh interpretations in a unique blend of Yiddish favorites and American spirituals. Selections were based on the repertoire of singer and civil rights activist Paul Robeson, with a number of the songs of the Eastern-European immigrant experience in urban sweatshops taken from the lyrics of poet Morris Rosenfeld, a Polish émigré. Each selection included English and Russian superscripts, with many slides also featuring bios of the many poets and songwriters represented in the program. The visual presentations and the performances and narrations (by Avram Mlotek) delivered by James and Mlotek yielded a solid standing ovation for an unforgettably moving experience.

Noted archaeologist Jodi Magness, the Kenan Distinguished Professor for Teaching Excellence in Early Judaism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, once again drew a tremendous crowd as she presented her subsequent findings at the site of the ancient village and synagogue at Huqoq in Israel’s Galilee since her previous slide/lecture to us in 2012. Her focus included the stunning and unique mosaics from the fifth-century monumental late-Roman synagogue building with vivid depictions of the biblical hero Samson. Her delivery was as dynamic and exciting as her “literally ground-breaking” discoveries. The audience was enthralled with her slides, information, and delivery, and responded with one question after another.

How to express being a Jew from Aschkenaz to Sepharad? In back-to-back lectures on consecutive days: first in Germany during the Weimar Period, followed by Spain throughout the last millennium, beginning with the 10th century:

On a sunny Monday afternoon, Prof. Kerry Wallach, Assistant Professor of German Studies at Gettysburg College, addressed “Coming Out as Jewish in Weimar Germany” to a capacity audience in the President’s Conference Room in Rosenthal Library. In a well-structured delivery along with an illustrative PowerPoint presentation beginning in the 19th century, she discussed such issues as: Jews who wanted to be recognized as such with visual evidence (i.e. attire) vs. “secret” Jews; titles of periodicals such as Martin Buber’s journal, Der Jude; and the first Miss Judaic Beauty Queen in 1929. Questions flew as the audience digested the answers along with a Kosher lunch!
The next evening, we went from a narrow time frame to a broad sweep of the Sephardic World from the 10th century to the 21st with Cordova at the core, delivered by master orator and historian Benjamin Gampel, holder of the Dina and Eli Field Family Chair in Jewish history at the Jewish Theological Seminary. His lecture, “Crisis and Creativity in the Sephardic World,” was presented at the Annual Leon and Morris Levy Memorial Lecture, endowed by the Levy Family. Prof. Gampel related how crises throughout time have led to Jewish creativity in not only coping with a crisis, but using it to their advantage in advancing their own status among the greater Muslim and later Christian communities. And his animated delivery moving about the stage and holding the audience with each word of historical fact deserved an Oscar!

Each year as the calendar turns to November, we begin to feel the cold of approaching winter accompanied by shorter days, and we also feel the approach of the solemn season of remembrance when synagogues were burned in Nazi Germany during the infamous Kristallnacht. Two programs in 2014 highlighted that history. Prior to our official observance of Kristallnacht together with the Center for Ethnic, Racial & Religious Understanding (see below), we turned our focus to a dramatic reading by actor Stephen Singer of Bernard Otterman’s book launch of his latest anthology of historical fiction, Inmate 1818, based on the author’s own experiences during the Holocaust when he was a young child in the labor camps in Poland, and miraculously survived. While history relates the facts, historical fiction allows the author to ponder ideas within reality, making the reader think—and drama goes one step further in depicting the visceral. And so it was during a cold, dreary November evening at Queens College. In a four-part program, seasoned actor Steven Singer opened with a dramatic reading, co-sponsored by the college’s Department of Drama, Theatre, and Dance. And at the end of the central story of the anthology of the same title, Dr. Bernard Otterman took the stage to offer his commentary as a Holocaust Survivor. The silence of the audience spoke volumes, together with some difficult moments for Dr. Otterman as he reeled the past.

The silence was eventually broken only by the many questions in the Q&A session that followed, with a book signing by the author concluding the evening events.

Particularly poignant, the annual Center for Jewish Studies and Center for Ethnic, Racial & Religious Understanding (CERRU) “Commemoration of Kristallnacht and Recommitment to Combating Anti-Semitism and Hatred,” supported by the Resnick Family and Sinai Chapels, sent a powerful message that “change is possible.” Keynote speaker Dr. Bernd Wollschlaeger, an award-winning physician from Florida and author of several books—including A German Life: Against All Odds, Change is Possible—described his personal struggle growing up in Germany in the shadow of his father, a highly decorated WWII Nazi officer. Facing that legacy head-on with extraordinary courage and commitment, young Wollschlaeger would convert to Judaism, immigrate to Israel, and serve in the Israel Defense Forces as a medical officer, all the while concealing his origins, until the day came when his children questioned him about his parents. Facing another challenge and with the support of his rabbis, he has since embarked on a mission of disseminating his message, that change is indeed possible. Resonating with the full-house audience, Wollschlaeger received an enthusiastic standing ovation, followed by an equally moving candle-lighting ceremony with five survivors, each escorted by CERRU fellows—all of whom committed to combat anti-Semitism and hatred—as well as a member of the Second Generation flanked by her son and his daughters. The musical interlude performed by the multicultural Vocal Ensemble of Townsend Harris High School and its director underscored the program’s message with the group’s fitting selections. Each segment of the program meshed with the powerful and poignant message.

Exploring an ancient community in the present was the subject of the next program, co-sponsored with the American Sephardi Federation: Reading Tehran in Tel-Aviv, a documentary film by director George Itzhak (in English, Hebrew, and Farsi), was followed by a panel discussion. George Itzhak was joined by Josephine Mairzadeh, an artist and a subject of the film (who also is Development Director of the American Sephardi Federation), and Dr. Houman Sarshar, cultural historian of Persian Jewry. Reading Tehran in Tel-Aviv tells the story of two Iranian-Jewish women who use the arts as a means to create a bridge between Iran and Israel, as well as their identities as Iranians and Jews, and yet the attempted symbiosis also leaves them with unresolved feelings and tensions. In a beautifully arranged kaleidoscope of scenes and images the film questioned how do we as Jews from the diaspora internalize the “home country” along with our Jewish identity in the U.S. or Israel? The evening’s topic was universal in many ways, as it is also specific to one group. In the panel discussion, moderated by both Dr. Sarshar and Dr. Spielmann, the discussion helped the audience understand this tension specific to Persian/Iranian Jewry from each of the panelists’ perspectives. A lively Q&A period with the audience and the expert panel further augmented the understanding of this rich cultural legacy.

“Exhilarating” was the word for the Music & Theater Series this year, which ended with our annual Chanukah celebration featuring the National Yiddish Theatre–Folksbiene presenting “Songs of Chanukah: Celebrating Motl Didner, Associate Artistic Director, National Yiddish Theatre, who appeared at our annual Chanukah celebration.

Avram Pengas adding Sephardic Greek flavor.

the Festival of Lights.” In Yiddish the word is a gvure, describing not only the performance but also the record-breaking 400-plus audience! Adding an international flair to the music, each of the seven musicians and vocalists, with musical director Zalmen Mlotek on piano, rendered both Ashkenazi and Sephardic selections in Hebrew, English, Yiddish, Greek, and Ladino—enhanced by enthusiastic audience participation in song, all the while clapping to the rhythm. And then came a surprise: Motl Didner, Yiddish actor and Associate Artistic Director of Folksbiene, in a one-man skit as a comic snowbird, equipped with a beach ball, enjoying Chanukah at the shore in Santa Monica! And it led to a standing ovation followed by a reception and buffet of potato latkes and soufganiot to close the evening and the Fall 2014 season.

After the Winter hiatus “A Purim Spiel” kicked off the QC Center for Jewish Studies Spring offerings. And a Purim spiel it was as a March 1 snowstorm brought us a wonderful preview of “Upside-down Humor.”

A hundred brave souls came to hear Peninnah Schram, renowned storyteller, along with Renaissance man Rabbi Moshe Shur and his two sons, Yehuda and Mordecai, in the “Shur Thing” band. Quickly the storm outside was forgotten in the warmth of the music and “Upside-down Humor” that filled LeFrak Concert Hall as each of the mesmerizing tales unfolded, with the audience actively participating in the stories and music. The snowstorm outside was forgotten in the spirit of Purim and the hot sales of CDs and books at the reception with the artists and hamantaschen galore afterward!

From soul-warming to heartwarming describes the next two programs presented by Queens College Prof. Mark Rosenblum, Middle East historian, in his screening and discussion of two unique films. The award-winning documentary Strangers No More (2010, English and Hebrew, directed by Karen Goodman and Kirk Simon), depicts the Bialik-Rogozin School, an exceptional school in Tel Aviv whose students from 48 different countries have experienced adversity and genocide. From grade school through high school level, each child related a story of hardship as they adjusted in a loving environment of dedicated teachers and counselors, all the while healing as they learned in Hebrew as their newly acquired language. There was not a dry eye in the house.

Another film, Wadjda (a 2012 feature film, in Arabic with English subtitles, directed by Haifaa Al Mansour) also “tore at one’s heartstrings.” This groundbreaking film, filmed in Saudi Arabia, features the country’s first female director and female lead actress, Waad Mohammed. Not only the story of a 10-year-old girl coming of age and seeking modernity within her culture, the film also reveals the difficulties of many women—including the girl’s mother—in a traditional society.

For both films Prof. Rosenblum not only answered specific questions as discussant, but laid the groundwork for understanding the region and lifestyles of those who question and challenge their condition.

For his next program, off campus at the Central Queens Y in Forest Hills, Prof. Rosenblum led a discussion of the Ibrahim Student Scholar Middle East Leadership and Dialogue Program with Queens College. He introduced the Ibrahim Program in a short film of a trip he took to the Middle East last May with some students, several of whom made up a panel at the Y. Addressing the topic “On the Frontline of Hope: A Student Awakening in the Tumultuous Middle East Transition,” each student discussed what had impacted them the most during the trip, especially in “understanding the other,” in an area where “violence is a part of life.” With countless questions from the audience, especially vis-à-vis Israel, Prof. Rosenblum advised everyone to keep their hearts and minds open as the Passover holiday approached.

Continuing the focus on the Middle East, the Center of Jewish Studies went from Forest Hills to Hollis Hills. Later in the semester, the focus was on Israel for the Center’s inaugural off-campus program in conjunction with the newly created consortium of Queens and West Nassau Synagogues, conceived by the Center’s Advisory Board headed by Chair Bernie Spear. The Hollis Hills Jewish Center presented “The Peoples of Israel: Cultures, Ethnicities, and the Shaping of Israeli Politics,” with Dr. Ronald W. Zweig, Director of the Taub Center for Israel Studies at New York University. In his lecture to an attentive audience, following a wine and cheese reception, Dr. Zweig deftly explored the complex map of what has been identified as the “groupings” in Israel, e.g., the secular Tel Aviv types, the Haredi, the Russians, the Israeli Arabs, and the settlers—and how the distinct agendas of each group have shaped Israel’s political reality.

Stepping back into history, we zeroed in on the western Levant in an afternoon luncheon and lecture on “Mediterranean Enlightenment: Livornese Jews, Tuscan Culture, and Eighteenth Century Reform,” presented by Queens College Prof. Francesca Bregoli, the Joseph and Oro Halegua Professor of Greek and Sephardic Studies, supported by the Pearl and Nathan Halegua Family Foundation. The lecture was based on Prof. Bregoli’s recent book of the same title, which was a finalist in the 2014 National Jewish Book Awards. To a full-house audience with not a seat to be had, Dr. Bregoli addressed the importance of the Mediterranean port of Livorno, home of one of the most privileged Jewish communities in early modern Europe. In her examination of its interactions with the broader community, she juxtaposed the Sephardic Enlightenment with that of Western Europe, pointing out the subtle differences between each. She noted that until recently “Enlightenment” referred primarily to the West only. Along with her PowerPoint presentation, the lecture was an “eye-opener” for those attending, resulting in a lively Q&A period. In addition to savoring each word, the audience savored each morsel of the sumptuous kosher Italian lunch that followed!

Our Spring semester generally ends with the lecture in observance of Yom HaShoah, a program endowed by Celina and Marvin Zborowski, Survivors of the Holocaust, and so, too, it was this year. This particular program is one of the most solemn sponsored by the Center in tribute to the Survivors, and in memory of those who did not survive. With the 70th anniversary of Liberation, this year’s program was especially poignant, highlighting the value of original documentation as time marches on. Dean Ann Kirschner of the Macaulay Honors College of the City University of New York presented “Sala’s Gift: My Mother’s Holocaust Story,” based on her book of the same title. It is an extraordinary example of a mother/daughter relationship. For almost a half century, Sala Kirschner, nee Garncarz, was silent. It was only just prior to heart surgery when she gave her daughter Ann 350 letters she had written and received from family and friends while interned in seven labor camps in Poland, Germany, and Czechoslovakia, safeguarding the letters throughout. In addition to the value of documentation, the lecture, accompanied by a multimedia presentation, also addressed the choice of a survivor to speak (or not) about his/her experience, and the effect that choice may have on the “Second Generation.” The interactive Q&A session reflected the intensity of the program, which was concluded by Marvin Zborowski. Coincidently, he and his wife came from the same region in Poland as Ann Kirschner’s mother. With a quiver in his voice he asked the Survivors in the audience to stand up and be recognized. It was only a handful among the 122 individuals in the audience, a reality that marks the 70th Anniversary of Liberation.

The Mitzvah Project is a combination of theatre, historical presentation, and conversation in which Roger Grunwald, actor and child of a Holocaust survivor, explores one of the most shocking aspects of the Jewish experience during the Second World War. Through the character of Christoph Rosenberg, a German half-Jew, this one-man drama—created with director and co-author Annie McGreevey—reveals the surprising history of tens of thousands of German men known as Mischlinge, the derogatory term the Nazis used to characterize the men who served in Hitler’s army even though they were descended from one or two Jewish grandparents.

Uncovering subtle and implicit nuances within National Socialism, this disturbing, intriguing topic is based on the academic research of military historian Bryan Rigg (BA, Yale; PhD Cambridge University). Rigg is the author of Hitler’s Jewish Soldiers: The Untold Story of Nazi Racial Laws and Men of Jewish Descent in the German Military, which won the Colby Award for military history in 2003. Since the time of its publication, the book has sparked interest in the topic as well as an ongoing debate among historians.

Following the performance Roger Grunwald will conduct a lecture delving deeper into the history that produced the mischling-soldiers—men who were the product of two centuries of German-Jewish assimilation, intermarriage, conversion, and the striving of a people committed to calling the German Fatherland their home. After the lecture, Mr. Grunwald will lead a discussion with the audience and a Q&A session.

Roger Grunwald has been a performing artist for over 30 years and is featured in the pilot episode of a Martin Scorsese-directed and produced HBO series on the rock ’n roll scene from the 1970s and 80s set to air later this year. Mr. Grunwald was honored with a 2013 grant from the New York Foundation for the Arts (NYFA) for the development of The Mitzvah Project. A graduate of the University of California—Berkeley and the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art, he has appeared in over 70 stage productions in the United States and Europe. From the early 1980s through the mid-2000s, he was one of the key founding activists who created the nonprofit All Stars Project (ASP), which has pioneered an innovative approach to youth development using theatrical performance. ASP has operations in six cities throughout the country including New York. During his 26-year tenure at ASP, he co-founded its experimental Castillo Theatre, where he starred in over 45 productions.

For Colden Auditorium, there is free parking in Lot 15 on Reeves Avenue (behind the Music Building) and easy elevator access from street level to the main floor of the Music Building; proceed outside and turn left to the concourse leading to Colden Auditorium.
BIBLICAL ARCHAEOLOGY SLIDE-LECTURE

ARCHAEOLOGY AND THE BIBLE: TWO WITNESSES TO ANCIENT ISRAEL

ELIZABETH BLOCH-SMITH

November 4, Wednesday, 7:30 pm
Rosenthal Library, Room 230

Admission for open seating $5. For further information, call 718-997-5730 or 4530.

Royal, prophetic, priestly, and scribal circles produced the Hebrew Bible to record Israel’s history and her evolving relationship with the national God. However, the varying agendas of these authors and editors compromise the value of the book as an historical source. By contrast, archaeology presents an un-edited record of the same period, including details and facets of culture not recorded in the text.

—Elizabeth Bloch-Smith

An accomplished and noted archaeologist with over 40 years of field experience, Prof. Elizabeth Bloch-Smith is a faculty member of the Theology and Religious Studies Department at St. Joseph’s University in Philadelphia. She has taught various university courses on Biblical and Ancient Near Eastern Archaeology since 1984 and also at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Her research interests include archaeology of ethnicity, Near Eastern archaeology, the Levant, and the Ancient Near East. A prolific writer, she has published on the early Israelite and surrounding cultures, Israelite religion, women in the ancient Near East, and Jerusalem through the ages.

In her lecture, Dr. Bloch-Smith will examine instances where text and artifact agree, where they supplement one another, and where they disagree. The disagreements are intriguing because they provide keys to the manipulation of texts to foster the various authors’ and editors’ specific agendas. Studied together, Bible and archaeology reveal ancient Israelites trying to understand the role of their God, the king, and the community in the course of events.

Prof. Bloch-Smith earned her MA and PhD from the University of Chicago, Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations.

DUBLIN JEWISH SPACES, FACES, AND PLACES

An illustrated history of the Jewish community of Dublin from the time of Cromwell to the present day.

MELANIE BROWN

October 19, Monday, 12:15 pm
Rosenthal Library | President’s Conference Room #2 (fifth floor)

Co-sponsored by the Queens College Irish Studies program.
Free and open to the public.

Melanie Brown coordinates the ongoing Dublin Jewish Oral History Project, a voluntary undertaking whose object is to chart the lived experience of Dublin’s Jewish community in the 20th and 21st centuries, of which she is a part.

The Dublin Jewish Oral History Project was conceived by the Jewish Representative Council of Ireland in 2010, as a response to an imperative to capture life-stories of members of the aging and rapidly diminishing Jewish community of Dublin. Dr. Brown was invited to coordinate this project on a voluntary basis in 2011; since then over 40 interviews have been conducted, mainly in Dublin, but also in the UK, the USA, Canada, and Israel. Among the themes that have emerged are Jewish communal, religious, and secular life in Dublin; education; emigration; and philo-Semitism and anti-Semitism in Ireland.

Dr. Brown previously was the Composer-in-Residence with the National Chamber Choir of Ireland, and is currently a Local Centre Examiner at the Royal Irish Academy of Music in Dublin. Her principal research interests include Irish Jewish culture and identity, and both oral and documented Jewish history in Ireland from 1660 to the present, topics upon which she frequently presents and publishes to an international audience.

A Kosher lunch will be available.

READING THE TORAH

CATHERINE CHALIER

December 2, Wednesday, 12:15 pm
Rosenthal Library | President’s Conference Room #2 (fifth floor)

Free and open to the public.

In our own time, readings of the Holy Books pose burning questions, such as those related to the land of Israel and to Jerusalem, to the singular destiny of the Jewish people, and to politics. Here the spiritual reading has its say: It beckons us to work in the direction of a peace, dedicated to a concern for the fate of others.”

Professor Catherine Chalier will explain how a spiritual reading—in this case according to the Jewish tradition—sheds light on other aspects, suggesting that the language of the texts under scrutiny contains meanings to be unfolded through time.

Catherine Chalier is a French author and a Professor Emerita of Philosophy at the University of Nanterre. Born in Paris, she received a classical French education. She holds an MA in Hebrew and a PhD in philosophy from the University of Paris. Her main interest lies in the Hebraic source of Western culture; she will explain why and how this source may provide new insight on philosophical questions (such as nature, history, the senses, and emotions).

Prof. Chalier has published several books on the philosophy of Emmanuel Levinas, whom she first met as a student. She also is interested in the dialogue between religions, especially with Christians and Muslims. She has published a book entitled L’écoute en partage with Minister Marc Faessler on the dialogue between Judaism and Christianity (Prize Colladon).

A prolific and award-winning writer, her most recent publications include Des anges et des hommes (Albin Michel, 2007; also translated into Italian); R. Kalonymus Shapiro, Rabbin au Ghetto de Varsovie (Arfuyen, 2011); Présence de l’espoir (Seuil, 2013); Lire la Torah (Seuil, 2014); and Aux sources du hassidisme: le Maggid de Mezeritch (Arfuyen, 2014).

A Kosher lunch will be available. RSVP: 718-997-5730 or 718-997-4530 or email rita.shliselberg@qc.cuny.edu.

Elizabeth Holtzman has had a distinguished 20-plus year career in public service. In 1973 she won a Brooklyn Congressional seat in a major political upset, becoming the youngest woman ever elected to Congress, a record she held for 42 years. Ms. Holtzman served for eight years in the House of Representatives, where she won national attention for her role on the House Judiciary Committee’s impeachment proceedings against President Richard Nixon during Watergate. She also won international acclaim for her pioneering work in bringing Nazi war criminals in America to justice. After uncovering the presence of Nazis here, she created a special unit to bring them to justice and secured passage of the law (the “Holtzman Amendment”) that facilitated the removal from the U.S. of those who engaged or assisted in acts of Nazi persecution.

Elizabeth Holtzman also was a leader in the women’s movement, co-founding the bipartisan Congresswoman’s Caucus, and authoring legislation protecting the privacy of rape victims. She also chaired the Immigration and Refugees Subcommittee, where she helped deal with the plight of the Vietnamese boat people, and authored the Refugee Act with Senator Ted Kennedy.

Subsequently, Ms. Holtzman was elected District Attorney of Kings County (Brooklyn) in 1981, the only woman ever elected DA in New York City, serving for eight years. She was then elected Comptroller of New York City, again the only woman to serve in that capacity.

Called back to the federal government in 1998, Ms. Holtzman was appointed by President Clinton to a federal panel that oversaw the declassification of more than eight million pages of U.S. government secret Nazi war crimes files. In May 2013, Secretary of Defense Chuck Hagel appointed her to a federal panel responsible for reviewing the problem of sexual assault in the military and developing recommendations for reform. She now chairs a successor federal panel.

Elizabeth Holtzman has written three books and numerous op-ed pieces, and has appeared on TV and in films, including two Academy Award-winning documentaries, “Hotel Terminus” on Gestapo Chief Klaus Barbie and “Women–for America, for the World” on nuclear disarmament.

The program also will include a candle-lighting ceremony with six Holocaust Survivors, escorted by student fellows from the Center for Ethnic, Racial & Religious Understanding, each of whom makes a commitment to combat anti-Semitism and hatred after introducing a survivor. In addition there will be a multicultural invocation and audiovisual and musical interludes.

Recently Prof. Doukhan has been focusing much of her research on her forthcoming book, Biblical Portraits of Exile (Ashgate, 2016), an exploration of the philosophical significations of exile in the book of Genesis. The book attempts to reframe the experiences of exile undergone by a number of protagonists in the book of Genesis (Adam, Eve, Cain, Abraham, etc.) from being interpreted as a mere punishment to a fecund and rich experience having ethical and redemptive implications. She also has started writing a small monograph on the Song of Songs from a feminist/philosophical perspective drawing on 20th-century thinkers such as Simone de Beauvoir, Luce Irigaray, and Emmanuel Levinas in order to distill from the Song an ethics of love. Part of her work was presented at the December 2014 Association of

He also has published extensively in the publications of the American Jewish Archives, American Jewish Historical Society, and the Holland Society’s de Halve Maen, and is presently working on a study of Jews in 1790 in New York City. He mostly uses primary archival sources, thereby presenting new and challenging interpretations of the history of this period. In recognition of his efforts, he was awarded the prestigious Lee Max Friedman Award by the American Jewish Historical Society in 2008 and an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters in 2006 from the Hebrew Institute of Religion as a “beloved professor of History, Conscientious Teacher . . . whose scholarly research and writing have given the academic world an appreciation for and a deeper understanding of the presence and contributions of Jews in the days of New Amsterdam until the present day.”

has seen his project “America and the Middle East: A Clash of Civilizations or a Meeting of Minds” continue to garner considerable national acclaim and media attention for its requirement that Jewish and Muslim students immerse themselves in the opposing group’s history relative to the Middle East conflict and construct a compelling “narrative” that supports the opposing viewpoint. The program has been featured in the New York Times and the Chronicle of Higher Education as well as on CBS-TV national news, National Public Radio, and a host of other electronic and print media; the project received a $100,000 grant from the Ford Foundation. Prof. Rosenblum was selected by the Clinton Global Initiative as one of two winners of an award for his work in the field of Religion, Conflict, and Reconciliation: “Insight on Incitement: A Public Education Program on Israeli-Palestinian Understanding.” In Fall 2009 he was appointed director of a new initiative devoted to fostering racial and ethnic understanding. This initiative has been awarded a $285,000 grant by the U.S. Department of Education and helps facilitate conflict resolution training of Queens College students, and engage members of the broader Queens community.

Prof. Rosenblum co-edited The Jewish Condition, Challenges and Response: 1938–2008, a collection of essays that assesses the state of world Jewry from competing perspectives (Transaction Publishers, New Brunswick and London, 2008). He also authored “After Rabin: The Malaise of the Israeli Zionist Left,” Robert O. Freedman, ed., in Contemporary Israel: Domestic Politics, Foreign Policy and Security Challenges (Westview Press, Boulder, 2008). His most recent writing includes “The Quest for Impact: Lessons Learned from the American Jewish Peace Camp,” in Robert O. Freedman’s Israel and the United States: Six Decades of US–Israeli Relations, Westview Press, 2012. He is the winner of the Queens College President’s Award for Excellence in Teaching and was selected by the Forward newspaper as one of the 50 most influential American Jews. For the third year Prof. Rosenblum led a group of student scholars on a leadership and dialogue program in the Middle East, including Israel and Saudi Arabia as part of the college’s Ibrahim Student Scholar Leadership and Dialogue Middle East Program.

In the warm and friendly ambiance of the Library, students and guests mingled and discussed their achievements, hopes, and aspirations for the future while reminiscing about their experiences at Queens College along with a number of their professors who were present. All were delighted as our graduates and awardees demonstrated anew their staggering academic achievements. Much praise was also given to the three recipients of the Center for Jewish Studies Award, which was bestowed upon the students working hard in both the office of Jewish Studies as well as on the editorial board of the Journal of Jewish Studies, a student-run publication since 1998!

Especially poignant were the discussions between the awardees and their sponsors. Each of the benefactors present, Jan Fenster (Fenster Award), Leonore Sinnreich (Sinnreich Award), and Eva Zimmerman (Berger Award) reminisced as they shared their incredible memories of loved ones for whom each of these awards are named. They include two alumni of Queens College, now deceased, as well as an aspiring student in Europe who perished in the Holocaust.

*R. deceased
An interesting parallel appears on the Web, accidentally setting a good example for us as Jews. It involves two men of the same name whose accomplishments are mistakenly intertwined in extensive columns on our computers. Both gentlemen died in recent years and were leaders in their industries and in their world involvements. Of the two, which is our Leon Levy and which is the other?

One Leon Levy’s estate recently left twenty-five million dollars to the New York Botanical Gardens. That’s not our Leon Levy. One gave thirty million dollars to City College. That’s not our Leon Levy, either. One gave millions to museums, opera companies, symphony orchestras, and archaeological digs worldwide. Not our Leon Levy! He was the other one. But our Leon Levy did give thousands of dollars to our own Center for Jewish Studies, as well as QC Hillel, and thousands to Hillcrest Jewish Center, and thousands to the Sephardic Jewish Center of Forest Hills, all in Queens. He gave thousands more to AIPAC and the Conference of Major American Jewish Organizations, and thousands to the Joint Distribution Committee, and thousands to the American Sephardi Federation, and thousands to the Center for Jewish History, and Bar Ilan University and Meir Panim and UJA, among many, many other recipients worldwide! The differences between our Leon Levy and the other Leon Levy are twofold. First, one gave in the millions while the other gave in the thousands, and that’s all right. They both felt their responsibility to give back to society, not to just take, consume, and leave. The second difference becomes obvious and worrisome in that only one Leon Levy understood his responsibility to Jewish causes. He couldn’t help his people with millions of dollars, but he could give whatever was available within his means. There’s nothing wrong with helping Jews with whatever we have—millions, thousands, hundreds, whatever and whenever we can. If each of us follows the path of our Leon Levy, giving and doing what we can for causes that will help our people survive, one Leon Levy multiplied by the rest of us right here, right now, can make the difference throughout the world. It’s that simple! Please give as you can, or rather, give as you must, to worthy Jewish causes. And also consider leaving a bequest to the Center for Jewish Studies at Queens College to ensure the continuation of this important organization, which supports students and the Jewish community.

Planned Giving: Leaving a Legacy for the Next Generation

If you want to ensure that the Center for Jewish Studies at Queens College will continue to serve and delight generations to come, you may wish to consider making a planned gift. Planned giving helps you maximize the tax benefits of your charitable donation while allowing you to provide a gift that you may not have thought possible. Regardless of your age or income, you can benefit from estate planning, and planned giving. There are many creative ways to provide a contribution to the Center for Jewish Studies while enhancing and safeguarding your own financial situation. For more information about planned giving, please contact the Office for Institutional Advancement at 718-997-3920 and speak to one of our advisors.

Friends of The Center for Jewish Studies

Like all Queens College Centers and Institutes, the Center for Jewish Studies must be financially self-sustaining. Its numerous free or nominally priced programs, publications, enhanced academic curricular offerings, and student scholarships simply would not be possible without external funding assistance. The Center for Jewish Studies is, therefore, most grateful for the gifts and grants that it receives from alumni, program patrons, elected public officials, and foundations, and is particularly thankful for the membership gifts ($36 and above) of those who have joined the Friends of the Center organization.

The Friends was established as an annual membership organization to maintain the functions and activities of the center. Monies of the Friends underwrite student scholarships, the student Journal of Jewish Studies, new courses, and public programs—for example, our “Is It 1938 Again?” conference attended by over 1,000 participants. Members of the Friends become active stakeholders in the Jewish Studies’ initiatives at Queens College and can take heart that they are supporting vital and dynamic Jewish academic and intellectual/cultural programs.

For Member Benefits, see page 38.
Friends of the Center

It is with deepest gratitude and appreciation that we publish here the names of those who have contributed to the Center for Jewish Studies at all levels as of July 31, 2015.

We have attempted to list member names as accurately as possible. If by chance your name has been omitted, misspelled, or misidentified we apologize. Please alert our office and we will correct our database. Call 718-997-5730.

The donors identified below include only those who have provided financial assistance to the Center between June 20, 2014 and July 31, 2015.
