How to Upload Videos to YouTube

To submit a video to the event, you should make a 30-to-60-second video. You can use your cell phone, a video camera, your webcam, or other sources for your video. You can use various video editing programs to make your video, including iMovie (on Macs), Windows Live Movie Maker (on Windows), or YouTube's online video editor: https://www.youtube.com/editor

When your video is ready to be uploaded to YouTube, then go to www.youtube.com

Sign in to your YouTube account (or make a YouTube account).

Go to this URL, and watch the "Video Challenge Announcement" video: http://youtu.be/ELlafs30gm0

Watch the "Video Challenge Announcement" video -- if you haven't viewed it before. To enter a video for the event, then you should "reply" to this video -- with the video that you want to submit to the event. (YouTube allows people to “reply” to someone else’s video as a comment; this is how you should submit your video.)

To make a video response, go to the "All Comments" area underneath the video's information (the same place you would click to write a comment). If you have not already signed in to YouTube, you will be reminded to do so.

If you forgot to sign in, you’ll see this:

If you remembered to sign in, you’ll see this:

Click the words "Respond to this video…" The box will become bigger, and you will be able to submit a comment. But don't type anything… Instead, look for the words "Create a video response" below the box.
Click the words "Create a video response." You will be taken to a webpage where you can submit a video. You can either select a video that you have previously uploaded to your YouTube account, or you can upload your video now (by clicking the words "Upload a Video").

Then click the "Start" button to upload your video.

You will be taken to a webpage where you can upload the video from your computer.

Click the "Select files from your computer" button to select the video file from your computer and upload it. After we have approved your video, then it will appear as a reply on the DMNS Queens College page.
