

Family and Consumer Sciences Teacher Education Fully Online Master's Degree Program

Starting this summer 2019, all graduate courses in the FACS Education program will be offered online. No more driving to Queens College in traffic and searching for a parking spot. You can now take graduate courses in a variety of the FACS content areas right from the comfort of your own home. So grab your favorite hang-out clothes and comfy slippers and get ready to participate and learn with other FACS professionals.

Benefits of Online FACS Courses at Queens College

- ◆ Learn anywhere anytime in your own comfortable environment.
- ◆ No traveling to and from Queens College so it saves you both time and money.
- ◆ Affordable graduate courses that can be taken as part of the Master's program or just for PD.
- ◆ Can advance your career and salary level.
- ◆ Courses taught by FACS educators with classroom experiences.
- ◆ Learn with other FACS teachers from around the state (and soon from around the country).
- ◆ Courses focus on both content and strategies to teach the content to secondary students in the FACS classroom.
- ◆ A variety of technologies are used to create a community of learners in every course.

Broaden your horizons and expand your knowledge and skills by taking a new online graduate course in Family and Consumer Sciences.

Contact Information:

Dr. Andrea Mosenson

Program Coordinator

Family & Consumer Sciences Teacher Education

718-997-4475 or 4161

Andrea.Mosenson@qc.cuny.edu

Family & Consumer Sciences Graduate Courses 2019

Summer 2019: July 1 to August 12 (6 weeks)

FNES 745: The Child in the Family

Instructor: Beth Schettino

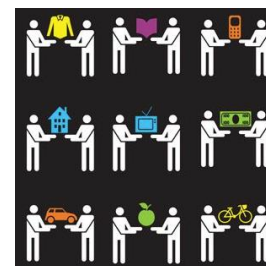

This course is an overview of parenting styles and family dynamics and their effects on child development. The course will cover topics such as effective parenting skills, strategies for raising responsible children, birth order, and the impact of a child on a family. The emphasis of the course will be on methods used to teach these topics to adolescents in either a middle or high school setting. Controversial issues related to parenting and child development will also be discussed including breast vs. bottle feeding, ferberizing, and attachment parenting. This course will provide educators the knowledge and resources to teach adolescents what it means to be a responsible parent in today's world.

FNES 751: Resources for Consumer Education

Instructor: Fernanda Armoza

This course focuses on methods and strategies for teaching essential independent living skills for secondary students. Community and national resources, strategies for differentiation, and current topics in "adulthood" will be explored. Teachers will focus on the needs of their student population and have the opportunity to research and focus on community specific topics, as necessary. Content areas will include communication skills, personal finance, self-care and smart consumer practices. This course will enable teachers to enhance or develop new curriculum for a multi-topic class such as Home & Careers (middle school) or Senior Skills (high school).

Fall 2019 Semester: August 27 to December 20, 2019

FNES 728: New Trends in Textiles & Apparel

Instructor: Adriana Galante

The current trends in textiles and apparel are what shape and mold the newest fashions for each season. What are these trends and how do they affect the marketplace? Topics will include the psychology of dress, fast fashion, design trends, eco-friendly movement in textiles, and careers in the field. The focus will be on strategies to implement these topics into both the middle and high school curriculums.

