Macaulay Honors College in New York City is hosting an art sale in partnership with the Vassar Haiti Project based in the Hudson Valley. This event will feature original Haitian paintings, and handicrafts, and will benefit victims of the recent earthquake in Haiti. One hundred percent of the proceeds will fund relief efforts.

Students from both colleges will comprise the staff at the sale. This is the first all student-run art sale and we desperately need your support. So, if you live in New York City or happen to be visiting the area, please stop by! We hope to see you at the event!

The artwork is first purchased from craftsmen at market price providing local artists with an important source of income. Funds from the sale will support or help pay for:

- Food, shelter and medical care of earthquake refugees;
- The Fondam Foundation, which directly supports artists who have been displaced by the earthquake;
- The Comite Artisinal Haitian, which has set up a fund for now homeless artisans; and
- The Holy Trinity Music School in Port au Prince, which was destroyed along with most of the students' musical instruments.

To view samples of the paintings, please visit: http://projects.vassar.edu/haiti/art/