

Congratulations, Crystal Diaz and Brittany Pompey!

Crystal and Brittany have been awarded the Psychology Department's Lakowitz Clinical Psychology Prize & QCPC Undergraduate Internship!

In their applications and interviews, psychology majors Brittany and Crystal demonstrated a level of thoughtfulness, desire to help the community, and aspiration to pursue an advanced degree in Clinical Psychology that will be a great addition to the Queens College Psychological Center (QCPC). Along with receiving a stipend, their prize includes a 2023-2024 internship at the QCPC, whose mission is to train future psychologists, and to serve the community. QCPC fulfills its social justice mission by providing culturally responsive, evidence based, and accessible (free or low fee) psychological services for pediatric, adolescent, adult, and geriatric clients. We offer psychotherapy/counseling to increase wellness by reducing symptoms and problems that can get in the way of good mental health. Our services also include educational and neuropsychological testing across the lifespan, as well as community outreach.

If you are an undergraduate Psychology major, and would like an opportunity to participate in the activities happening at our training clinic, look out for Psych 2813.02: Fieldwork in Mental Health at the QCPC being offered in Spring 2024.

Applications for the next cycle of the Lakowitz Clinical Psychology Prize & QCPC Undergraduate Internship will be due September 9, 2024 for the 2024-2025 Academic year. The application material will be posted on the Department of Psychology website at the start of the Fall 2024 semester.
