Description. There are many funding programs that support efforts in enhancing educational experiences of our students. Queens College is uniquely positioned for such opportunities because of our diverse student population. This event will focus on training opportunities in STEM education. We will hear from several colleagues who have received such training grants sharing their experiences. We will also discuss new opportunities in training grants that can be explored by us.

Funding Opportunities

The Henry Luce Foundation - Higher Education program

Website: <https://www.hluce.org/programs/higher-education/grant-categories/>

Contact: Mr. Sean Buffington, Program Director for Higher Education at buffington@hluce.org

Description. The Higher Education Program welcomes excellent, innovative proposals from colleges and universities and the organizations that support them. Such grants aim to (1) stimulate and support scholarship, especially projects that break new ground and that cross disciplinary and geographic boundaries, (2) ensure that high-quality research informs policymaking and public discussion (3) prepare the next generation of diverse faculty and academic leaders. The program encourages inquiries from institutions that are less well-resourced and/or that serve disadvantaged or marginalized communities. Higher education program grants have several characteristics:

- They support projects in the humanities and qualitative social sciences. (There is one exception: projects that seek to support women or to increase the number of women in certain STEM fields are also eligible.)
- They support projects aimed at faculty and doctoral students; in general, projects aimed primarily at undergraduates will not be supported.
- They support team-based projects or institutional initiatives rather than purely individual research projects; such projects or initiatives will seek to have broader impact—on a field or on the sector.
- The projects they support will not only produce new knowledge but will also model new approaches to the production, dissemination and application of knowledge.

Letters of inquiry can be submitted at any time through online portal at
