

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

CETLL Faculty Development Seminar (Spring 2026)

Pedagogies of Writing

Facilitated by Amy Wan,
Special Assistant to the Provost on Writing and Professor of English

Apply here by December 8, 2025.

Writing at Queens and CETLL invite applications for Faculty Fellows to participate in a seminar on writing pedagogy, where they will learn about meaningful assignment design, feedback, assignment sequencing, writing with multilingual students, and the influence of generative AI. Fellows will consider how writing genres and expectations in their own disciplines shape how writing is assigned and assessed. There will also be an opportunity to design potential writing courses.

We encourage applications from QC faculty members who:

- Assign writing to your students
- Teach (or plan to teach) CW2/writing intensive classes
- Want to develop or convert CW2/writing intensive courses for your department

We are particularly interested in participants who are pre-tenure and want to learn about assigning effective and meaningful writing or mid-career faculty who would like the opportunity to re-engage with their teaching.

No expertise or previous training is necessary, and all disciplines are welcome. The seminar will be a chance to talk about teaching and learn from peers; it will be especially welcoming to participants who are interested in being more comfortable with their teaching.

Faculty Fellows will commit to:

- Attend all 4 seminar meetings on February 9, March 9, and April 20 during free hour (12:15-1:30 p.m.) (with an optional co-working meeting on May 4)
- Attend both workshops on Feb 23 and March 23 during free hour (12:15 - 1:30 p.m.)
- Review seminar materials as assigned
- Develop and share a teaching resource and brief reflection (250-500 words) by June 1, 2026
- Contribute materials to the CETLL Academic Commons site for viewing and use by other QC faculty

Faculty Fellows will receive a stipend of $1,000 upon completion of the seminar.

Interested faculty members should fill out this short form of interest by December 8th. All applicants will be notified of their status by December 19th.

For questions, contact Amy Wan (amy.wan@qc.cuny.edu).