

PEDAGOGY POP-UPS

Pedagogy Pop-Ups are a space for faculty to engage in peer-based discussion about teaching and learning at Queens College.

Global Development Theories at Your Doorstep

Wednesday, April 22, 2026

12:30 p.m. - 1:30 p.m. | Kiely Hall 111A and on Zoom

Faculty Presenter: Jorge Alves (Political Science & Latin American and Latino Studies (LALS))

How can we support students to critically reflect on how global ideas are present in their communities broadly construed, but also physically in the neighborhoods / enclaves in which they might live in? Join us for a presentation and discussion of coursework and assignments that engage connections between the global and the local.

Register Here

Faculty Presenter Bio

Jorge Antonio Alves (PhD, Brown University) is Associate Professor of Political Science, where he teaches courses on comparative and international politics of Latin America, and the political economy of development in the Global South. He is also the current director of the Latin American and Latino Studies (LALS) program, where he has organized a long-running interdisciplinary speaker series.